The Champion. Of all the cheerful lads upon this mundane sphere there's one who holds the record for talking with good cheer; his tales are fascinating, they never fail to charm; his lies are so entertaining and they never do us harm; he lies on all occasions, when he can get in a word, he does it most engagingly. It never sounds absurd; beside him Cook and Peary, Mountsman and the rest, and all the Ananias club are knocked quite silly with him; he lies at morning early, he lies at noon; he lies again at evening, he lies both late and soon; he's willing to accommodate at any hour of day, his lies are bright and clever and drive the blues away; he has the wily weather man skinned forty city blocks; at the fish bar and the gun bar, the jeers and booms and cracks. Beside him they're all amateurs, they'd like to, but they can't. We have with us today the Oldest Inhabitant!
